Holocaust survivor, Esther's safe world is turned upside down, when her daughter Deborah rushes home with the news that their NJ temple is on lock down, and her grand daughter Elaina is being held inside. During the endless waiting Esther travels back through her mind seeing the results of her decision to remain silent about the Holocaust and its effect. She re-experiences her past and hears her daughter and granddaughter's unanswered pleas for her story. Deborah and Elaina have been hurt by her silence. Esther comes to understand it is her duty to speak.

But will it be too late for Elaina to hear?
